IS DOURO RIVER IN PORTUGAL HAUNTED?

While the Douro River itself is not typically classified as "haunted" in the traditional sense, the historic cities and landmarks along its banks—especially in

—are steeped in ghost stories and dark legends.

Haunted Locations Near the Douro River

- São Bento Railway Station \(Porto\)

: Located near the river, this station is famously said to be haunted by the ghost of a nun who roams the corridors. Some travelers have reported hearing her footsteps and whispers among the 20,000 blue-and-white azulejo tiles.

Wish Fire at the Douro River in Portugal

- Ribeira District

: This historic area right on the river's edge is the setting for many "spooky tours" that recount tales of infamous crimes, secret rituals, and the spirits of those who lived in its narrow, ancient streets during the 19th century.

- Abandoned Ruins: Along the banks of the Douro in Porto's Old Town, there are numerous crumbling structures and "ghost city" ruins that contribute to a chilling atmosphere, particularly at night.
- Quinta da Juncosa

(Penafiel): Situated in the Douro region, this abandoned 16th-century manor is legendary for the tragic tale of a baron who mistakenly killed his wife. Locals claim to see ghostly apparitions of the couple and hear the sound of galloping horses.

THE WITCHES OF SANTA CATARINA, BRAZIL

Santa Catarina, particularly its capital Florianópolis, is often called the "Island of Magic" and is considered "haunted" in a folkloric, mythological sense rather than a dangerous one. Local legends heavily feature witches, curses, and mythical figures like the "La Cuca" alligator, especially around the Lagoa da Conceição and Lagoa do Peri.

Key Folklore and Haunted Locations:

- Florianópolis \(Island of Magic\): The capital is rich in tales of witches, with folklore claiming they inhabited the island, causing curses and magical occurrences.
- Lagoa da Conceição & Lagoa do Peri: These spots are central to witch legends, including the myth that a witch's curse created the Lagoa do Peri.
- La Cuca: A figure in Brazilian folklore, this creature is often described as a female, human-like alligator or dragon, believed to haunt the region and gather disobedient children.

HAUNTED EUREKA, CA

Eureka, California, is considered one of the most haunted locations on the West Coast, particularly within its historic Old Town district. Known for its Victorian architecture, the city features numerous spots with reported paranormal activity, including Old Town's Opera Alley, 2nd Street, and the Inn at 2nd & C (Eagle House). In 1990, empath Dee Dee, my dad (Paul Marceau Roberts), Cindy Anderson and myself, headed up to Eureka, CA in search of Bigfoot and to take in the history of this coastal town. Cindy and Dee witnessed the doorknob turning, in one of the rooms at Eagle House. When they opened the door, there was no one there. My dad drove us to Eureka and the only thing odd that we saw was 5 deer crossing the road. We were hoping to see Bigfoot.

Eureka Inn in Eureka, CA

Humboldt County, particularly around Eureka and Willow Creek, is a major hotspot for Bigfoot reports, with 48 recorded sightings since 1957 and recent activity in 2024. A September 2024 report involved hikers hearing, but not seeing, a large animal in Founders Grove, 33 miles southeast of Eureka.

- Old Town Haunted History Tours: These guided walking tours cover the area's "bawdy" past, featuring tales of tragic deaths and sightings in Old Town.
- The Inn at 2nd and C \(Eagle House\): Guests and staff have reported a male ghost, particularly around the third-floor staircase.
- The Eureka Inn: Reports include flickering lights, apparitions, and sounds of children playing, with a "problem room" frequently cited for paranormal disturbances.
- The Falk Ghost Town: Located near the Headwaters Forest Reserve outside Eureka, this abandoned logging town is said to have a lingering "presence".

- The Carson Mansion: While a private club, its striking, often eerie Victorian design has made it a focal point for local ghost stories and a model for "haunted house" aesthetics.

For the most haunted experiences, visitors often explore Old Town's Victorian buildings and the waterfront, particularly in the evening when the fog sets in.

Salinas, California, is considered haunted by locals, with numerous reports of ghostly activity in historic sites, schools, and rural roads. Key locations with alleged paranormal activity include the Steinbeck House, Salinas High School, and the notoriously haunted Old Stage Road. Let's take a closer look at some of these haunted locations. When I lived in Monterey, CA I visited the Steinbeck House, hoping to experience something paranormal. Unfortunately, I did not experience or witness anything paranormal and I went to the Steinbeck House 6 times. My brother Andy Soyo had a unique experience in Salinas, CA, he ran into Cesar Chavez who was a labor leader and civil rights activist. There have been recent reports that people nowadays sometimes see the apparition of Cesar Chavez out in the lettuce fields.

Salinas High School (1882):

Reports include ghost-like voices, screams, and cold chills in the bell tower, as well as unexplainable sensor activity in the cafeteria. Many locals consider this the most haunted building in Salinas. Some believe the bell tower is haunted by a former student named Jennifer. Legend has it that Jennifer was bullied in school and committed suicide by driving her car into a tree. Some students believe that Jennifer is seeking out the students that bullied her and doesn't realize that she is dead.

Shadowy Figures seen at the Steinbeck House in Salinas, CA

The Steinbeck House:

The boyhood home of author John Steinbeck is said to have a mysterious presence, featuring silhouettes in windows and phantom sounds of doors opening and closing. The boyhood home of author John Steinbeck is widely considered one of the most haunted sites in the city. Even Steinbeck himself once wrote that he saw "things walking at night that it is not good to see". Modern reports include sightings of a silhouette in a downstairs window and mysterious disembodied footsteps. Reports of paranormal activity include a dark, oppressive presence, and the sound of doors opening and closing. Visitors and staff have reported seeing a shadowy silhouette in the front room window. Others have described a presence that enters, moves around, and leaves. Investigations, including those featured on the television show Ghost Adventures, have explored claims of a dark, heavy energy within the home, with speculation that a portal might be drawing spirits to the location. In 2022, the Ghost Adventures crew investigated the home, reporting experiences with equipment malfunctioning and, according to online claims, a contentious interaction with the location. While some report fear, others, including Elaine Steinbeck (John's widow), have described feeling a peaceful presence, suggesting John's spirit still enjoys the home. The house, located at 132 Central Ave, currently operates as a restaurant managed by the Valley Guild.

Old Stage Road:

The Ghost Car/Mustang Sighting is a common tale. Witnesses claim that they were chased by a driverless white Ford Mustang or other phantom vehicles. The Woman in White (La Llorona) is often seen, sometimes described as a weeping figure searching for her children or a woman who was murdered. Some visitors have said the Woman in White will appear in the backseat of your car. Visitors have reported hearing screaming, seeing phantom figures, or feeling unexplained, violent "thunks" on their cars. The area around the former Lagunita school, the "Hangman's Tree," and various bridges are considered high-activity areas. The road is historically associated with violence, accidents, and tales of bodies being dumped in the area. Some visitors to Old Stage Road claim that they have seen an ugly troll that walks sideways across the road. If you run over the Old Stage Road Troll, you will fall victim of being in a severe car accident that will occur within a week's time.

201 Main St (Old Bank):

An old bank building where patrons have reported noises, including a woman calling for an altar, following a fatal, historic robbery. Some locals and visitors have reported seeing the Ski Mask Phantom. Lonnie Sinclair of Carmel says that he visited the bank and was confronted by a man with a ski mask on, outside of the bank. Lonnie pulled out his wallet and raised his hands, thinking he was being robbed. Lonnie dropped his wallet and went down to pick it up. When he stood up straight, the Ski Mask Phantom was gone. Lonnie realized he ran smack dab into a ghost.

Chualar Road:

A spot on this road is supposedly haunted by a Woman in Black who appears to drivers. The paranormal reputation of Chualar Road in Salinas is primarily defined by sightings of a vanishing female apparition and its historical connection to the "Chualar Tragedy," one of the deadliest traffic accidents in U.S. history. The Ghostly Woman of Chualar Road is also known as the Woman in Black. This ghost has black hair and is seen walking along the side of the road at night. Multiple witnesses claim that as they drive past her, she simply vanishes. One specific report describes a motorcyclist who was thrown off his bike by an unseen force. He blacked out and, upon waking, saw a woman with black hair standing directly over him; she disappeared as soon as he blinked. Some drivers have reported striking a woman who suddenly appeared in front of their vehicle. Upon stopping to help, they find no person, no body, and no damage to their truck. Locals say the haunting originates with the Chualar Tragedy (1963). Much of the area's haunted reputation stems from the Chualar Bus Crash on September 17, 1963. A freight train collided with a flatbed truck that had been illegally converted into a makeshift bus carrying 58 farmworkers. The accident killed 32 bracero workers and injured 25 others. The crash occurred at a railroad crossing near the intersection of Foletta Road and River-Chualar Road, about a mile outside Chualar. A memorial at the site, easily accessible via modern Foletta Road, commemorates the victims. While the tragedy is often cited as a reason the area is "haunted," specific sightings of the workers themselves are less documented than the general "ghostly woman" legend.

Chualar Road is often mentioned alongside other nearby "haunted" locations in the Salinas Valley. One of those places is Crazy Horse Canyon Road. This nearby intersection with Old Stage Road is a frequent site for reported sightings of La Llorona (the Wailing Woman), a crying figure dressed in white who appears on deserted roads after midnight. Then there is Los Coches Adobe. I investigated Los Coches Adobe with 3 HPI (Halo Paranormal Investigations) investigators and we did obtain 5 EVPs of people speaking Spanish. Los Coches Adobe is located in nearby Soledad, this historic site is home to the "Lady in Black." Visitors have reported feeling a presence pushing down on their chests, sometimes leaving perfect handprints on their skin when they wake. Last, but not least is Old Stage Road. Locals report phantom cars and the ghosts of women approaching vehicles to ask if the occupants have seen their dead children. "The Ghost Tracks" While some enthusiasts associate the "handprints on the car" legend (where the spirits of children push a car to safety over train tracks) with the Chualar bus accident, this is likely a misapplication of a famous urban legend from San Antonio, Texas. In the San Antonio version, putting a car in neutral on the "ghost tracks" supposedly results in it being pushed over the rails, leaving tiny handprints in baby powder sprinkled on the bumper. This DOES NOT happen at Chualar Road. This is a case where one legend mixes up with another legend.

GHOST WANKERS PODCAST:

During my high school days (1971 to 1973), I would hitchhike from my school (Oceana High School) to Big Sur. I would make a stop at Sanchez Adobe Ranch to ride horses and do a little work at the ranch. My girlfriend Raquel Nunez at the time, would invite me over to do some work with her father. She made me into a ranch hand. I would wind up cleaning up the horse's stalls. After I was done, then I was able to ride a horse alongside Raquel and her horse. The trails at the ranch were always somewhat creepy and I always thought someone was watching us. Not too far from the ranch was Big Sur. Many of my buddies like Eugene Pointer, William Reid, John Hester, Steve Vestneys would meet up with me at Big Sur. Many of my high school friends would party at San Gregorio State Beach. San Gregorio State Beach is a very haunted beach. Locals claim that they have seen Spanish explorers in 16th century clothing walking up and down the beach and then vanishing. The beach has a reputation for being somewhat "creepy" due to its remote, secluded nature and the sometimes-unsettling presence of possible spirits felt by locals or caretakers on the private property surrounding the beach. It is primarily known as a scenic, natural spot with a history dating back to a 1769 Spanish expedition. A hippie that frequented this beach was ran over by a vehicle on Highway #1. This hippie would always carry a sign that said: "Ain't Going to Lie, just want to get High". Whenever we saw him, we had a good laugh because of his sign. Then one day, we heard he had died from multiple injuries after being hit by a vehicle. Eugene Pointer claimed that he saw the ghost of this hippie and he was still holding his sign. Eugene couldn't believe what he was seeing and blinked 3 times and on the 3rd blink, the hippie was gone. Here is what I know about the paranormal activity that happens at Big Sur.

SPECIAL NOTE: Another haunted beach is "Free Beach", along Highway #1 and Devil's Slide. Many vehicles have went over the cliffs of Devil's Slide and people who frequent Free Beach have made claim of seeing ghostly victims of Devil's Slide. I have been to Free Beach a few times and never encountered any ghosts, but my friend John Hester claims that on one Summer evening, he saw a girl playing in the sand and when he looked back, the little girl was gone.

Big Sur is considered highly haunted, famous for the elusive "Dark Watchers" in the Santa Lucia Mountains and paranormal activity at the Point Sur Lightstation. Local legends describe shadowy, 10-foot-tall figures that watch hikers at dusk, while the lighthouse is frequently cited as one of California's most haunted sites, featuring spirits of shipwreck victims.

THE DARK WATCHERS

For centuries, travelers and residents (including author John Steinbeck's mother) have reported seeing tall, shadowy, human-like figures on the mountain ridges. They are often described as wearing capes or hats and vanishing when approached. The Dark Watchers are also known as Los Vigilantes Oscuros. They are giant, featureless humanoid silhouettes reportedly seen standing on the ridges of the Santa Lucia Mountains. They typically appear at dawn or dusk, standing up to 10 feet tall with wide-brimmed hats and walking sticks. The Watchers were famously documented by John Steinbeck in his short story Flight and by poet Robinson Jeffers. Skeptics suggest they may be an optical illusion known as a Brocken specter, where a person's own shadow is projected onto mist or clouds. According to newspaper archives in the mid-1960s, a Monterey Peninsula local and former high school principal went on a hiking trip in the Santa Lucias when he suddenly spotted a dark figure standing on a rock and surveying the area. When the principal called out to the other hikers, the creature vanished.

POINT SUR LIGHTSTATION

Known as a "hotbed" of activity, this 1889 lighthouse has been investigated by many ghost hunting groups. Visitors and staff have reported hearing voices, footsteps, and seeing apparitions of past keepers. Often cited as the most haunted lighthouse in America. Visitors and paranormal investigators report seeing a solitary lighthouse keeper in a 19th-century uniform walking around. The site is linked to over a dozen shipwrecks along the treacherous coastline. Reports include the sound of a young girl singing, phantom footsteps, and a "malevolent" presence near the falls that is said to push people. Many people have seen "The Ghost Light" that swings back and forth. Visitors and rangers have reported seeing the lighthouse beam turn on, even when the station is empty or inactive. Mike Sonner of Pacifica says it is most likely the ghost of a lighthouse keeper who is swinging his lantern back and forth. Mike has actually seen the Ghost Light and has no logical explanation for the sighting. Mike says since the lighthouse has a reputation of being haunted with the history of numerous shipwrecks and isolation, the site is known for paranormal activity, including doors opening on their own, shadowy figures in the lantern room, and the spirit of a young girl. The Point Sur Lighthouse Woman in White has been seen walking the cliffs, while a tall man in 19th-century clothing has been spotted. Barbara Fairweather, ghost hunter from Daly City claims she captured an EVP from the 19th-century tall man and his name is Frances. Visitors have reported hearing disembodied voices, including a young girl, and footsteps in empty rooms. Doors in the keeper's house have been known to close on their own. Some reports suggest the spirits are former keepers and their families returning to their isolated home. Specifically, the kitchen in the restored keeper's house is a hotspot for activity, where spirits are said to still linger. The Lantern Room is haunted by shadow figures. The shadow figures have been seen in this top-level. Lucy Dunridge, a tourist from San Diego claims that she has seen shadow figures moving about on the ceiling. Lucy says after seeing the shadow figures, she will never return to Big Sur. Lucy says the lighthouse is just too creepy.

DEETJEN'S BIG SUR INN

This historic inn is rumored to be haunted by the spirit of its founder, Helmuth Deetjen, whose presence is often felt in the "Grandfather" room. The ghost of Helmuth has been seen reading a book.

UFO/UAPs

UFOs/UAPs have been seen in Big Sur. There was the 1964 Big Sur Incident. An article describes how a team filming Wikipedia Atlas missile tests from a Big Sur mountaintop allegedly recorded an unidentified object flying alongside a missile and shooting a beam of energy at it. While some, including former Lieutenant Robert Jacobs, claim it was an extraterrestrial craft, others like project engineer Skeptical Inquirer Kingston George argue the object was actually a decoy warhead. Then we have the Vandenberg Sightings. Nearby Vandenberg Space Force Base, a frequent site for rocket launches, has been the location of multiple reported UAP sightings, including a 2003 incident involving a large, hovering object.

BIGFOOT

A hiker reported finding a large, unknown footprint in the Big Sur area in 2022, leading to speculation about Bigfoot.

Comments: Your plane ticket is in this book. Do some paranormal globe-trotting with Richard Estep and step into his time-traveling gateway to the unknown. Everyone is pretty familiar with Bigfoot, Mothman and the Loch Ness Monster. In this book Richard does some deep researching into these monster icons and discovers some odd connections, more mysterious foot notes about these monsters that are really not that well known. In this book you will learn about the Morgawr, a sea serpent that lurks off the coast of Cornwall, or how about those mysterious and odd-looking Fresno Nightcrawlers? Yes! It's all here.

Let's take a step into this book and see what else is hiding in the shadows. This book is very fascinating. I have done some monster hunting and I can see from this book, Richard basically covers a whole lot! Richard also exposes some of the cryptid great hoaxes. A good example of that is the cryptid known as the Hodag from Rhinelander, Wisconsin. The legend has it that the Hodag is a powerful beast with the ferocity of a bear, the strength of an ox and so on. For a while people in the town believed the story, only to learn later on that it was nothing more than a hoax created by a trapper named Eugene Shepard. Find out what he did and how he pulled off this hoax in this book, you will be amazed. As I go through this amazing book, there are stories about Fenrir, the canine offspring of Loki and Angrboda. Fenrir was no joke, this monstrous werewolf attacked the powerful God known as Odin.

You will get detailed stories about various werewolves. If the Black-Eyed Kids creep you out, there in this book too. Certain parts of this book, you might want to have your lights on, especially when Richard talks about the Aswang and the dreaded Manananggal. You will learn about the grisly murder of Lara Mae Concodes by her uncle. The uncle believed that Lara was possessed by a Manananggal and the horrible things that happened to Lara by her uncle. You will be suffocated by the terror of the uncle's actions. What does the CDC (Centers for Disease Control) think about zombies? Find out here in this book! So much information to absorb! Krampus, Morgawr the Sea Monster, vampires and did I hear that right? Mussolini was claiming that he caused the demise of Nessie, the Loch Ness Monster?

There is a nice section about Mothman in this book. The Mothman story is very intriguing, especially since the Mothman was seen in my hometown of Sacramento in 2009. Richard has poured in a lot of information about the Mothman. You will also learn about the curse of Chief Cornstalk who was on the ground dying from multiple gunshot wounds. The Chief cursed the land where he was murdered at. People believe the curse brought on plane and train crashes, car wrecks, fire, flood, mining disasters and illness. Was the Chief's curse connected to the appearance of Mothman? This book has the answers! Find out more about the mysteries of the Jersey Devil, Chupacabra and Bigfoot! When you get started with this book, you will find it hard to put down. This book is absolutely mind-blowing! You will find yourself salivating as you turn to the next page!
